More Rational Economic Policy Expected to Result From Conference at Geneva

BY CARLS TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR GENEVA-An official summary of the League of Nations work in 1927 describes the year as one of intense and continuous activity, as symbolic, in fact, of the League's vitality. Not a week passed, it says, in which there was not a meeting of statesmen high officials, experts and technicians summoned and organized by the League in Geneva or some other European city, in Latin America or in the Far East.

Alluding to the increasing coperation of such important nonmembers of the League as the United States and Soviet Russia in the technical work of the League, the report maintains that this is striking evi-

The report, however, admits that the results obtained as regards arbi-tration, security and disarmament were less decisive than in the eco-nomic or financial sphere.

near leading a textbook life. He has a nice feeling for the punctilio. His sense of what constitutes a proper personal or party advantage is critical and austere, and sometimes causes his friends and party colleagues to regard him with an uncomprehending eye.

Nevertheless, this sound sense of propriety makes Walsh one of the Democratic Party's finest assets in Congress and in the country. Combined with aggressiveness, it makes him a square fighter. His style is smooth and compact. He is surefooted. He knows not only what the goal is, but precisely what means are permissible in achieving it.

To him the purpose of the oll lease investigation was to get the vital facts. Once he had them, he saw neither purpose nor propriety in making a Roman holiday upon the person of the offenders. Punishment, he knew, should be for the courts.

There was a fog over Manatee Hill, 20 miles from Belize, and Colonel Lindbergh kept circling around evidently groping for his route.

(By his landing at Belize, the American good-will filer added a new record to his long list of achievements, being the first man ever to bring a land plane down there, the only other airplanes visiting the city have been United States seaplanes which landed in the harbor?)

Trip Made in Quick Time

Colonel Lindbergh landed on the only available field at Belize, a large sports ground at the northern end of the city. The approximate length of the field is 400 yards and its breadth 80 yards narrowing to 50 at the northern end.

The surface is a grassy flat inclining to swampy on the seaward side. The prevailing wind is easterly at right angles to the landing ground. There are no hangars. There are two wireless masts.

Before leaving Guatemala City Colonel Lindbergh said that he expected to make the trip to Belize in three and a half hours. His landing at the British Honduran capital was made just three hours and 25 min-utes after his departure from Guatemala City, despite the fact that he was hindered by some fog in the neighborhood of Belize.

WASHINGTON (A)-When he took off at Guatemala City, Colonel Lind-berg was very doubtful that he would be able to make a landing at Belize. All reports he had received as to the condition of the field there indicated it would be impracticable to make a landing, although he reserved final judgment until he could look the field over from the air. In line with his custom of postponing a final decision as to his exact route or his starting time until the last moment. Colonel Lindbergh left Guatemala City without having com-pletely matured his plans for the re-mainder of the journey to Havana, Becretary of the Treasury now a member of the Massachusetts Legislature which is expected to spend a large part of its coming session in debate on what to do with the transit system.

In a statement analysing the situation

In a statement analyzing the situation of both the Elevated and the Eastern Massachusetts Railway sys-tem, Mr. Wadsworth expresses the view that the claims and counter-claims arising out of the Public Control Act of 1918 may as well be disregarded and the whole case be rested on the question:

What Question Rests On "Shall the State continue to be the

"Shall the State continue to be the manager of the Elevated of shall the stockholders take over the job under the usual State regulation?" In last year's session Mr. Wads-worth advocated return of the road to its stockholders. Protesting the provision under which cities and towns guarantee the dividends of the company, Mr. Wadsworth says:

"If the Elevated, either under public or private management, can render proper service without such guarantee it should be ended. The Elevated is not confronted with any emergency at the present time and has been self-supporting for seven years. It should and can be run in the future on the principle of service

"The Elevated trustees have authority to draw upon the taxpayers for any amount they may need. No board should have the right to raise and spend public money regardless of the other needs of the community." Finds Results Not Hopeful

Summarizing the results of public operation, Mr. Wadsworth, who is an experienced public utility engineer and financier, concludes that the rehabilitation of the transit system has veiled attack on the Oriental. That only been the same as would have followed permission for an increase of fares under private operation. He points out that, while state management has improved the service, the service of nearly all public utilities has improved since 1920. He adds that the trusteeship plan has failed as a measure to raise capital for the railway since it has not brought the market for the common stock up to par where new stock could be sold.

Valuation figures recently reported by the State Department of Public Utilities show, according to Mr. Wadsworth, that the State would se little if anything in surrendering the option the control act gives it for purchase of the road. These fixed the value of the Elevated at $118,-837,253 and the option price at ap-proximately $9,500,000 less, while noting that possible abandonments of power plants might reduce the value to no more than the option

He points to this valuation also as evidence of sight probability of the company's demanding exorbitant fares to pay dividends on a large valuation, and expresses confidence that under the State Public Utilities Commission the general plan of regulation of public utilities would apply successfully to the regulation of the metropolitan transit system.

Several of the Rhodes scholars from this Province have rendered useful service abroad, one of them being employed in the interests of the League of Nations.

Issue was taken between two schools of thought, those represented by George Soule and the Labor Bureau, Inc., New York, who felt that falling prices are a boon to the figure, and wages about 94 per cent. Professor Fisher brought out that the federal reserve system has effected a rough stabilization of prices. Meyer Jacobstein (D.), Representative from New York, announced his intention of proposing unemployment insurance shortly in Contact of the conta wage-earner, and those represented by Dr. Royal Meeker, former com-missioner of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, who felt it is the bane of ployment insurance shortly in Conthe American Economics Association elected Frederick M. The majority of economists appeared to agree with Dr. Meeker, who declared unemployment always increases as price levels fall and forecast such a period shortly. Prof. John R. Commons of Wisconsin University, and Prof. Irving Fisher of Yale backed this view, the latter urging a stabilized dollar to protect

Mr. Soule argued that although a orrelation between rising unemployment and falling prices has been shown by statistics, these are not necessarily connected. What happens when prices fall, he said, is that manufacturers practice new effici-encies and perfect labor-saving de-vices that throw employees out of

Dr. Meeker, in reply, said he found nothing paradoxical in a price decline accompanied by business ac-tivity. The same phenomenon has occurred at least seven times since 1870, he said. These, he said, were short-term spurts of activity during long drawn-out depression from falling prices. "Falling prices always have brought depression and increased unemployment and always will." he asserted. As the remedy he proposed a stabilized monetary measure to stabilize production, distribution and employment.

'Yellow' Newspapers to Give Way to Growing Culture, Teachers Are Told

SPECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR IOWA CITY, Ia .- Belief that the 'yellow journalism" of the modern newspapers of tabloid type "will become whiter just as the vituperative journalism of early newspapers became more conservative," was expressed by W. Vext FRIDAY hippet will be the most valuable car ever offered for so little money

FTER months of preparation, we are ready to present the perfected Whippet for 1928.

You will be satisfied and delighted with every detail of its equipment and performance. You will be amazed when you learn how low is the price. For Willys-Overland resources and equipment are now such that no car of equal quality can be built and sold at a lower price.

Greatly Increased Facilities

Within its class, we believe, no car combines so many advantages --- offers such remarkable value. To make it possible, our plans have included major revisions in factory equipment --- a new body plant doubling our capacity -- the addition of new departments - the installation of new and highly perfected machinery - and notable economies in production

The factory service cost on the Whippet has been the lowest of any car we ever built. As a result, we have been able to minimize materially the usual allowances for service costs another contributing factor to the lowered price of the 1928 Whippet.

Present light car standards are a tribute to the pioneering the Whippet has done. Four-wheel brakes --- lower center of gravity --- greater economy --- greater roominess --- quieter engines --faster speed and pick-up --- great beauty -- no one today would think of buying a car that had not made these advances.

Many Added Features

Among the many things you will like in the 1928 Whippet are improved bodies in a wide variety of beautiful colors, and fitted with cadet-type visor, full crown fenders, an engine that doubles its rated horsepower, full pressure lubrication, silent timing chain, gasoline tank in rear, long, semi-elliptic springs, oversize balloon tires and snubbers, an adjustable steering wheel, automatic windshield wiper, rear view mirror and stop light.

Holds Remarkable Records

Owners have driven and tested the Whippet for more than five hundred million miles. It has established record after record in proof of its superiority. It holds the A. A. A. Coast - to - Coast economy record, averaging 43.28 miles to the gallon. In a national economy test 5,508 owners averaged 38 miles to the gallon. Whippet established a record of 74.6 miles an hour in a speed test on Rockingham Park Speedway. It accelerates from 5 to 30 miles in 11.5 seconds; turns in a 17-foot radius, and parks in 14 feet of curb space.

We suggest you see the Whippet and get the new price next Friday. Examine it carefully. Compare it with any other car. Then ask about the easy plan to pay for it out of your income.

Engineering Leadership

In January, 1927, we made this prediction: "4-wheel brakes will be standard equipment on all cars, regardless of size, within the

In spite of this statement two and one-half million purchasers have since bought cars having only two-wheel brakes. These cars are now being rendered obsolete in point of brake equipment by changes on the part of manufacturers who had not yet sensed the coming trend.

Whippet standardized on four-wheel brakes more than a year ahead of other light cars, and yet four-wheel brakes are only one feature of Whippet's advanced design today!

COMMITTEE CUT

East Loses Its Domination in Football Rules Body-Harvard Loses Place

NEW YORK, Dec. 30 (P)-Eastern domination of the National Football Rules Committee, effective ever since its formation 22 years ago, came to ar to bear by gridiron forces throughout vention of its parent body, the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

The east has its representation cut from six to four places under the new method of selection, based upon one member from each of eight N. C. A. A. districts and two members-at-large. At the same time, the demands of college football coaches for greater representation are met by the inclusion of five mentors, who thus compose half of the membership.

The two present officers of the committee—Edward K. Hall of Dartmouth College, chairman, and W. S. Langford of Trinity, secretary—retain their places as members-at-large. The rest of the personnel, appointed by districts, follows:

T. A. D. Jones, head football coach, Yale; W. W. Roper, head football coach, Princeton; H. L. Stegeman, athletic director. University of Georgia; A. A Stagg, head football coach and athletic director. University of Chicago: W. E. Aberry athletic direction from the coach and athletic director.

Follows Similar Action of National Federation, Thereby Paving Way for Return of Two Other Groups Which Withdrew Year Ago

This action followed a similar step taken Wednesday by the National Amateur Athletic Federation. It paves the way for the return to Olympic membership of two others of the four organizations which withdrew a year ago at Washington, after differences on methods and policies with the group headed by the Amateur Athletic Union. The other two organizations which dropped out at the Washington meeting, the Y. M. C. A. and Western Conference, are expected to rejoin the Olympic body shortly.

The text of the resolution adopted by the N. C. A. A. follows:

"Being assured that the tryouts for the Olympic Games of 1928 will be conducted on the basis of 1924, we recommend that in the interest of international amity and international sport that the association accept the invitation of the president of the Olympic committee to resume membership in the American Olympic Association."

Under the tryout program, to which reference is made, the 1928 champion—ships of the N. C. A. A., will have the ciation.

Under German Rule Sought to Become French, but Is Still Dissatisfied

PARIS—From the beginning it has sen realized that the task of France Alsace would not be altogether sy. Alsace, which remained under trman government for nearly 50 German government for nearly 59 years, was restored to France at the tions of a firm constituted to publish autonomous newspapers, and certain arrests indicate that firm action in 1870. It is not unfair to describe Alsace as a sort of Ireland. Whether its rulers are French or German, it is discontented. Under German rule it longed for its return to the French polity; but after its return, it quickly developed grievances.

Government has forbidden the operations of a firm constituted to publish autonomous newspapers, and certain arrests indicate that firm action is at last to be taken to suppress mischlevous activities.

One of the most prominent Alsatians, Baron Klaus von Bulach, notorious for his refusal to recognize the collision with the autonomous newspapers, and certain arrests indicate that firm action is at last to be taken to suppress mischlevous activities.

There has spying up an agitation for a large measure of provincial autonomy. France, since the days of Napoleon, and indeed since the days of Richelieu, has come under a highly centralized authority, and it would be contrary to French tradition and French ideas to allow a separate little state to exist inside-the larger state. Therefore France has enstate. Therefore France has en-deavored to absorb alsace, perhaps somewhat too quickly, with the result that the Alsatians have protested rather violently. They do not mind being French if they are regarded as Alsatians first, but they desire their own laws and they would retain their

Concessions Necessary
Hence arises a grave problem. It is irksome for France to admit that French legislation should not be applied in its entirety in one of the French provinces. Yet some concessions are obviously necessary.
The very language that is spoken by the Alsatians is not French, and a comparatively small proportion of the inhabitants understand French.
The Alsatians, again, are deeply re-The Alsatians, again, are deeply re-ligions, and they wish religion to be taught in the schools, though in France itself the schools are fully France itself the schools are fully secularized. In the majority, the Alsatians are Roman Catholic, but even the non-Catholics are equally insistent on religious teaching whether they be Protestants or Jews.

Indeed, as a result of successive upheavals, it has been found impossible to introduce the whole Prench régime into Alsace as quickly as was at one time considered possible. Alsace, in short, succeeded in obtaining most of its dethe most convenient outlet for many products of Alsace—It would have seemed that the Alsatians would have settled down.

Agitation for Autonomy

Nevertheless an agitation for autonomy has been conducted for the most part through newspapers published in the German language. It is asked that Alsace should be allowed to administer itself and should have a good deal of financial independence. Various organizations have been formed, and there have been somewhat dramatic cases which have found their way to the law courts.

M. Poincaré has set his face against suggestions of separatism, while defend his have to paratism, while defend his have to paratism. suggestions of separatism, while doing his best to remove specific causes of complaint. The French Government has forbidden the opera-tions of a firm constituted to publish

But recently it was alleged that documents and letters which have fallen into the p session of the French, revealed sources of the money which has financed some of the agitators. Those sources are outside Alsace, and therefore, more than ever, the ques an international affair.

to be stated that, immediately doubt were raised about the inspirers and supporters of the Alsatian move-ment, he wrote a letter in which he publicly repudiated his associates, and apparently he now accepts French authority and renounces his former opposition. Thus an entirely new turn is given to the situation, and it may well be that, with his re-cantation, and the exposure of the motives of certain agitators, Alsace will cease its resistance and will be assimilated. Surely this is a consummation devoutly to be wished.

Consequently the long-debated question of compulsory vaccination has returned into the focus of public discussion, and the debates in the discussion, and the debates in the Second Chamber of Parliament which will take place, no doubt, early in 1928 are anticipated with much interest.

Among medical practitioners, there are many who disapprove of the step taken by their board. However, there seems to be a growing host of doctors who are not so certain as of old and who find themselves in accord with the opinion expressed by that board. Some of these even advocate the abolition of compulsory vaccination

The exports of Karachi are largely a reflex of the vast irrigation schemes carried out in the hinteriand of Sind and the Punjab. The principal exports through Karachi during the past five years are (arranged in order of value): Cotton, wheat, rapeseed, rice, barley, wheat flour, grain and cotton seed. Cotton exports gained 155,000,000 rupees in that period. The principal imports are cotton piecegoods, yarn, sugar, metal, kerosene oil and machinery—cotton piecegoods and yarn being easily first.

However, the use of that hot radiator does not end there. Vegetables that will stand for rapid boiling are prepared and set in the oven on the radiator while the baking is going on. The stone is also used later for reheating gravy, puddings, pudding sauce, vegetables and so forth. Generally no extra fuel is required for this purpose because the radiator is so hot that it brings food to a boil ouite rapidly. Ike a hot stove lid quite rapidly, like a hot stove lid— which may be used instead of the radiator—or an electric plate.

When all the heat required for the preparation of the meal has been used, the breakfast food that is to be cooked for a long time is set on the hot stone and utilizes the last bit of heat in it. Or, if there is no hot water on tap, the radiator may be used to raise the temperature of the water intended for washing the dishes or for the children's hands and faces. Of course, by heating this in the fireless where no heat can escape, the water will be raised several degrees higher in temperature. But even without a fireless, one finds that if the pan is set on the stone in the open air, the temperature of the water will rise several degrees, and that means that just that much less gas or other fuel must be used to heat the water sufficiently.

When one uses a sad iron with detachable handle, it can be inverted when the ironing is done and used similarly to cut down the fuel bill instead of allowing the heat to be dissipated in the air all to no pur-

Cooking in the Baseburner

In many a home a big baseburner keeps the living room warm and everybody has forgotten how grandeverybody has forgotten how grand-mother used to bake potatoes for her family by putting them in on top of the coal when it was about half-way down in the drum, or how the bean pot was generally to be found there of a Saturday afternoon. Grandmother cooked dishes that re-quired long, slow cooking—like our Grandmother cooked disnes that required long, slow cooking—like our casserole dishes today—on the ledge where the water pan is designed to stand, and there she heated dishwater and kept the teaketile.

water and kept the teakettle.
The stovepipe went up through the bedroom above where it was surrounded with a drum that kept that room warm, too, by heat that in these days is generally wasted by passing up the chimney.

Some of these big stoves have a small oven at the back that makes it possible to prepare many delicious dishes without a bit of extra fuel when the big stove is used for heat-ing the living rooms. That there are thousands of homes in the United States where this means of heating is used today was proved by a recent survey conducted by the General Federation of Women's Clubs. This showed that in 14 out of the 18 coldest states, the majority of homes are heated with baseburners—proof posi-tive that the stove still holds first place in heating American homes, hard as it is to believe when one is customed to a furnace.

Lots of good things that children have smacked their lips over were baked, covered, in the ash pan of the baseburner. The ashes were wellshaken out so the coals were exposed. then the ash pan was emptied and the prepared dish set into it and pushed back into the stove. It was wonderful the good things grand-mother could produce from that improvised oven: old-fashioned Indian puddings, cornmeal gems, chicken baked to a turn, and such roasts as would make one's mouth water!

The Oil Heater Bolls Water

Then there is the little oil heater used for taking the chill from the rooms before starting the furnace in the fall and on cold days after the furnace has gone out in the spring. While it is radiating its cheerful warmth, the water for cooking the vegetables can just as well be heating or the potatoes boiling upon it, for they will cook there just as well as on the kitchen stove And if a member of the household is late for his meal, his food, set in covered fruit jars with a little water surrounding them, may be kept hot for him on the heater.

In some houses the hot water tank is set in the bathroom where it will radiate enough heat to moderate the temperature there. In other homes a little cupboard has been built around this tank and the inside is strung with rope to form lines for drying clothes; this is especially good where there are children for whom a good deal of washing must be done, or where the weather is bad for drying dish towels as often as one wants them washed and dried. In still other places, where the gas rate is high or considerable hot water is needed, the heat generated is conserved as much as possible by wrapping the tank with asbestos.

One woman frequently increases the capacity of her oven by means of something like a fireless cooker arrangement she keeps on top for use as necessary when the oven is going. This is a wooden box with the bottom knocked out and the inside bottom knocked out and the inside and outside covered with asbestos neatly tacked on. A dish nearly cooked can be finished on top of the oven so its place inside may be used for another dish not requiring so long a period of cooking.

Food will boil inside the oven as well as over the direct flame on the stove proper, so when the price of gas has to be considered the oven

Modern Equipment for Fireplaces

AFTER being considered for centuries the most essential part of a living room, the fireplace suddenly went out of style in the nineteenth century in American cities where furnaces or other forms of central heating were available. Of recent years, however, people have begun to realize more and more that nothing takes the place of the traditional hearthstone as a center of domestic or social gatherings.

As a well-known New York dealer said recently to a representative of The Christian Science Monitor. Fireplaces have never gone out of vogue in country houses, but they are being intreasingly introduced in city residences."

In a living room a trivet either to stand on the hearth or to hook on to a grate where coals are used, may be very useful for warming up a bit of soup or holding a toast rack.

Depending on the kind of fuel used there are baskets and boxes for holding wood and skuttles of metal for containing coal. Some houses show benches, either straight to put at one side of a fire or three-sided homes, there is a growing demand for the ornaments and especially the Berlin woolwork of the Victorian era. Unfortunately, when this work went out of fashion it underwent a period of being absolutely disliked, and one woman recently regretted that she had thrown away quite a lot. Some of it was no doubt very crude, but other pieces, though not so exquisitely fine as the Georgian cross-stitch, were very well done, and the coloring was most pleasing.

The cushion shown in the illustration is a particularly fine and unusual example, with charming little bunches of flowers in delicate coloring on a white ground. The characing on a white ground. The characteristic tassels, shaded in terra cotte and yellow at the corners, add much to the attraction of this delightful old piece.

In talking about this return of appreciation for the Victorian needlework Mrs. Christie, who was the first woman in the field of antiques to start collecting it, and tiques to start collecting it, and who thus revived an interest in it, said: "I get mostly squares for cushions and large fire screens worked with big birds—parrots and cockatoos. And I have a quantity of pieces about 12 or 14 inches deep and 1½ yards long that were used at the top of the old tester beds."

Fire Irons

Just as a fireplace is meant for service and yet may be the most beautiful adornment of a room, so the attendant equipment, while primarily meant for service, may be highly decorative.

Most indispensable of all appliances are the poker, tongs and shovel. Next in importance are andirons in the case of fireplaces burning large logs of wood, though they are often dispensed with where smaller logs only are needed. It was not a determination to be cheerful or witty or profound; but it was a natural expression, like that him, and ready for a good time.

... He was not unaware if men just about wide enough to pass whom he considered his superiors were present; he was sure to make the understand that he meant to sit at their feet and listen to them, even if his own excitement ran away with his way through them without a guide.

Here is a suggestive touch of Lewis Carroll:

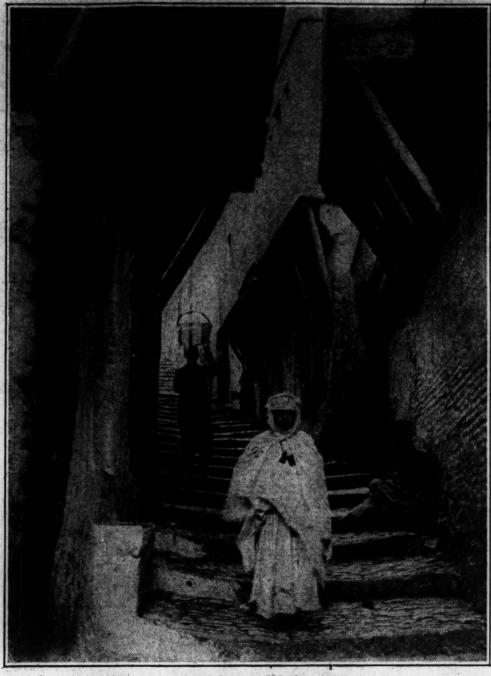

I said it in Hebrew—I said it in Dutch—
I said in it German and Greek:
But I wholly forgot (and it vexes me much)
That English is what you speak!

Unfriendly critics were wont to say of Arnold that he elaborated his theories too fully. Something of the sort, however, may have been in Lewis Carroll's thought when he wrote:

The thing can be done, said the Butcher, I think.
The thing must be done, I am sure. The thing must be done! Bring me paper and ink,
The best there is time to procure.

Other examples of what seems remarkably like satire can be found in the poem. Our theory may be, like other such fancies, the merest moonshine, yet it has a certain interest for those who search after literary curiosities. And indeed, such an interpretation seems not unreasonable to one who knows the general trend of English thought in the "seventies." In any case, The Hunting of the Snark has its own value, quite apart from any burrowings into its recondite significance. Our little investigation cannot in any way affect its appeal as a piece of priceless nonsense.

At the apex of this triangular-shaped mass of white houses, crooked streets and steep, irregular-alleyways, stands the Kasba, or Citadel, some four hundred feet above the sea, which was commenced in 1516 on the site of a still older building. The history of this ancient palace of the Deys formed the history of Algiers until the time of the conquest, when the walls were despoiled of their beautiful tiles and the vaults of their enormous treasures. But the streets of old Algiers are ever the same, and they serve to connect the present with a fascinating past of great antiquity.

Giving Child a Direct Contact with Good Literature

Special Correspondence

The number of schools in Britain which have adopted the method of education advocated and practiced by the Parents' National Educational Union is growing rapidly. For example, nearly all the schools in Gloucestershire are now working on P. N. E. U. lines, and there is scarcely a county which does not contain a number of such schools. This is not to be wondered at when it is recognized that the method, revolutionary though it appears in some respects, is yet marked by an essential simplicity. It is based on two fundamentals: the bringing of on P. N. E. U. lines, and there is scarcely a county which does not contain a number of such schools. This is not to be wondered at when it is recognized that the method, revolutionary though it appears in some respects, is yet marked by an essential simplicity. It is based on two fundamentals: the bringing of the child into direct contact with an abundance of real literature, and the reproduction by the child of the results of his reading and listening.

Schools in England have never made the best use that can be made of books. This is especially so in the case of the elementary schools. So the place of books has had to be taken by an excessive amount of talk on the part of the teacher and the devising of ingenious rules of "methods." Publishers' textbooks and collections of snippets known as methods. Publishers' textbooks and collections of snippets known as "readers" have, in the past, formed the stock of literature of the average school. The revolutionary step taken by the Parents' National Educational Union consists in the elimination of the internedigues, between the publisher of the process of the proc the intermediaries between the child and the great writer.

Discards Old Idea ' The teacher who works according to this method does not water the books down. He discards the old assumption that children cannot "understand." He does not explain, does not question, most surprising of all—does not "revise." He reads a passage to the class once only, and the pupils then relate the passage read. And it is found, when the method is adopted, that the pupils narrate orally or reproduce in writing remarkably accurate accounts of what The teacher who works according to this method does not water the markably accurate accounts of what they have heard or read.

The number of first-class books thus heard or read for himself-by each pupil is far greater than under the ordinary system of education. A child in his seventh year will relate "The Pilgrims' Progress" chapter by chapter, and some half a dozen other books of the first rank. In his eighth or ninth year he works efficiently with several books at a time, books of history, travel, poetry and aventure. In the next two years he begins the reading of Shakespeare. Plutarch, and similar authors. Year by year his reading proceeds in this child in his seventh year will relate "The Pilgrims' Progress" chapter by by year his reading proceeds in this more. way—and he knows what he has read, as is proved by his reproduc-

In a class for young children the teacher reads from the book and after one hearing the pupils narrate the passage with surprising accuracy. In a higher class they write the reproductions. In classes above the age of 11 the children read for the age of 11 the children read for themselves. The difficulty of expense in the supply of books is sometimes overcome by the device of buying, not 30 of each for a class of 30, but 10 or 6 of each, and allowing the class to work in groups. The teacher passes from group to group, each of design color and processes rather to be suitable and permanent. By allowing pupils to change from one book to another at will, the habit of responsibility and independent study is inculcated.

Although an examination is held at the end of each term yet no revision of the work done takes place. No more conclusive proof than this could be required of the efficiency of the system in developing attention and receptivity. The ordinary teacher would consider himself in an impossible situation if he were expected to obtain results without frequent and thorough revision. It is an axiom with the P. N. E. U. teachers that the child performs all the acts of generalization, analysis, comparison, and judgment in the act of knowing. The child reads and reproduces, then he knows.

Remarkable results are being achieved by this method. Examiners

STORY WORDS

Glamour

That the English language contains the poetic term "glamour, meaning "magic beauty." whose equivalent is found in no other tongue, is due to Sir Walter Scott, who has done more than any other author to enrich the language with picturesque terms which he gleaned both from books and the current dialectic speech. "Glamour' and "gramarye," both of which were found by Scott in old bailad literature and revived for poetic usage, were originally synonyms of "grammar." It is easy to understand how the Latin word "grammatica," which from the meaning of philology in its widest sense came to be applied to learning in general, including the occult sciences of magic and astrology, should in corrupted forms such as "glamour" and "gramarye" have taken on the significance of enchantment or mysterious learning. Scott uses both of these words in "The Lay of the Last Minstrel" in the lines: "It had much of glamour might, Could make a ladye seem a knight." and "And how he sought her castle high, That morn, by help of gramarye." Here "glamour" has more the sense of magic spell while "gramarye" signifies necromancy. But while "glamour." "glamorous" and the phrase "cast a glamour" are in current usage, "gramarye" is obsolete. who has done more than any other

Wabash Sets a New Standard

Travel

Latest achievement shown in magnificent new equipment

TO MAINTAIN the high standard of its passenger service, the Wabash Railway has placed forty-four new all-steel passenger cars, including Dining Cars, Club-lounge Cars, Cafe-dining Cars, Coaches and Chair Cars, on its trains to and from Chicago, St. Louis, Detroit, Kansas City, Omaha and Toledo. Constructed under plans and specifications that required every consideration for the passenger, they embody all modern features for safety, convenience and comfort, having everything to satisfy the most exacting passenger.

Roller Bearings

Roller bearings which give a gliding smoothness to the motion of the car as it literally "rolls" along, is an outstanding feature of the dining ears and club-lounge cars. Enjoyment of the meals and service is greatly increased by this smooth and quiet "gliding" over the rails.

Other Features

Other new features include a starting attachment for raising windows when they stick; filtered drinking water with water and ice in separate compartments; exhaust ventilators producing a constant change of air; abundance of electric lights, with dimming device; improved system of vapor heating; luxurious furnishings; beautiful decorations. All cars of solid all-steel construction with steel floors, sides, ends, roofs and trucks and steel inside finish.

No Better Trains

The "Banner Blue Limited" between Chicago and St. Louis with added refinements of latest design dining car, equipped with roller bearings; the Chicago-St. Louis "Midnight Limited" with new clublounge cars on roller bearings; and the St. Louis-Kansas City "Midnight Limited" with compartment sleeping cars and new club-lounge cars equipped with roller bearings are among the world's finest trains. There are no better trains. Other fine Wabash trains are the Omaha Limited, Pacific Coast Limited, Continental Limited, Detroit Special, Chicago Special and St. Louis Limited.

Heavy Cash Sales to Establish Losses Under the Income Tax Law

NEW YORK, Dec. 30 (P)—Further fregularity developed in today's stock market with trading turning dull on the approach of the holiday.

The undertone was fairly firm, with pools active in a number of issues which are likely to attract reinvestment funds after the turn of the year. Buying centered largely in a selected assortment of food, independent steel, office supply, copper and public utility shares. There were heavy cash sales to establish losses under the income tax law.

The closing was firm. Short covering to complete year-end adjustments caused some large advances in stocks which had been under bear pressure. Electric Refrigeration gained 3 points, American International and Christie Brown 5, and some of the low-priced motors, particularly Willys-Overland, were taken in round amounts. A block of 10,200 shares of Missouri Pacific common was sold for cash at 50%. Total sales approximated 2,200.-000 shares.

BEDUCTION IN FRENCH BANK RATE PLEASES

Has Significance in That
It Shows Strong Position of the Franc

Br Casts reon Monros Bussiv

PARIS, Dec. 20—France took an important step yesterday in making its discount rate the lowest of any European country when the Bank of France rate of 5 per cent, which had held since April, was lowered to 4 per cent. The rate has not been so low as this since the beginning of 1914, when it was 3½ per cent.

The war and its aftermath drove the rate up until it reached 7½ in July, 1926. The satisfaction of banking irrless and the public generally here is unmistakable, for the new French rate is taken as a sign that a period if prosperity is commencing to open ap.

The prevalent abundance of money.

The prevalent abundance of money, the desire to increase the total Bank of France discounts as a check on speculative tendencies, and the hope of encouraging a lower cost of living are among the main reasons why the state institution made this move. Conditions were conducive for the step to be undertaken now, but it was undeubtedly influenced by the thought of the coming de jure stabilization of France.

Both here and abroad this reduction of the bank rate will be regarded as strengthening the financial position of France, and thus smoothing the way for a stable currency unit.

France, and thus smoothing the way for a stable currency unit.

Together with the announcement of the new bank rate comes the report today of a shipment from New York of $10,000,000 in gold for the Bank of France. Insurance stipulations do not permit more than this be sent at one time, he see one or two more such shipments are expected to follow. This money is part of the French gold reserve held in the United States, and the moment is propitious for the transfer because of the franc's present strength relative to the dollar. Gold can actually be brought over with shipment cost and insurance covered, it is understood, with a profit to France.

Taking into account the sum of this.

France.

Taking into account the sum of this shipment of gold, and the possible additional $20,000,000 or $30,000,000 set aside for the use of France in American vaults, and recalling the large amount deposited in the British Treasury to the French account, together with metal reserves here, the paper circulation of the Bank of France, which is in the neighborhood of 60,000,000,000 francs, is estimated to have a 60 per cent gold covering. Some experts speak even of 100 per cent, if gold holdings of the bank in foreign currencies are included. Thus we see, the franc is gradually being placed in an impregnable position.

Many well-known British firms, including Doulton & Co., will contribute to the display.

"Radio has grown with such amaz-"Radio has grown with such amazing speed, bringing with it many men new to approved business practices, and competition has become so keen that it seems only natural that abuses have developed," said Mr. Johnston. "While we began investigating practices in the trade more than a year ago, we were prepared to take no concerted action until recently. Last August the Mid-West Radio Association came to us with an appeal for help, then manufacturers and jobbers, and after that came concertis

New inventions, tumbling upon the heels of each other, have been heralded with elaborate statements; a multiplicity of equipment names and technical terms. equipment names and technical terms have been hurled at customers; scarcely have the details of one method of reception been studied by the public than a new method appears; never has there been an industry which introduced so many contradictory statements, claims and counter-claims, said Mr. Johnson. "The result," he concluded, "has been worse than confusion to the been worse than confusion to the buying public. It has undermined to a large degree the faith of the public in radio advertising. This not only hurts the sales of the shady dealer but of the dealer who is trying to the supera thing. It diminishes do the square thing. It diminishes the effectiveness of every dollar spent in advertising. The trade realizes that to clean up this condition and to restore public confidence in radio advertising and sales practices, will put radio merchandising on a sound and firm basis which will benefit everybody concerned."

"This is but the first step, "said the Federal Radio Commission in announcing its new set-up, "in securing good reception on this band, the remaining 10 or 11 channels, either through co-operation between stations before Jan. 1, or through hearings beginning with that date, precedent to the granting of new licenses on those channels.

"A glance through the accompanying list of channels, 25 of which were cleared as of Dec. 1, shows that the newly designated band in-cludes important stations scattered throughout the entire United States. Over these cleared channels it will thus be possible for rural and re-mote listeners to pick up stations in all sections of the country. Another test for distance hounds will be the 5000-watt pair, WBAP and WOAI, at Fort Worth and San Antonio, Tex., respectively.

"San Francisco can be heard for three hours after Newark shuts down on 710 kilocycles. And Portland will come in on WEAF's wavelength after the big Long Island transmitter has ed for the night.

"KOA, Denver, Colo., as a mile-ost for cross-continental radio ourists, will be heard when two 550-

"Four cleared channels have been provided for four high-powered new York Stations, WEAF, WJZ, WOR and WABC, the last named assignment becoming effective with the Dec. 1 changes, in order to secure for this 5000-watt transmitter a cleared channel across the continent. "Chicago has been assigned some five cleared waves, and while this is the largest number given to any largest number given to any single community, it must be remembered that Chicago, by its central location, is in a position to furnish programs for the entire United States, both east and west, and for this reason, considered from the standpoint of the tremendous auditores of remote listeners surround-to bring to the remote and rural listeners during the present winter season as high a degree of reception as is possible, an improvement corresponding to that accomplished for city and local listeners by the commission's earlier actions."

DOUKHOBOR SETTLERS NOW BETTER CITIZENS

PECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR VICTORIA, B. C .- Marking an entirely new development in the Doukhobor problem in Canada Doukhobors of British Columbia will soon cease their present attitude of complete indifference to Canadian affairs and Canadian citizenship, according to advices received by the Provincial Government, Instead the Russian colonists will commence to take an interest in public affairs and seek to become active citizens of this country, it is stated.

As part of their program they will extend their present industrial and business activities in many direc-tions. While Peter Veregin, leader of the Doukhobor movement in Can-ada, has announced that the sect will bring large numbers of its followers to the Dominion in 1928, the Government understands this immigration movement will be directed to the prairie provinces, not to Britis

Rumors of Peace

HVERYBODY must rejoice in the prospects of a Franco-Italian rapprochement. There has been, for several years, a growing tension between the two countries, and that tension could only be relieved by frank conversa-tions. It would indeed be strange were France, which has shown such willingness to make sacrifices in the cause of peace, embroiled in another European feud. With Germany, France has become remarkably friendly. With Italy, France fell on bad terms. Now it is useless to take such pains to dissipate the clouds above the Rhine if those same clouds are to re-form above the Alps. Happily, the danger, which was never real, may, if proper measures be taken, soon be dispelled.

Italy, which considered that it was badly treated at the Peace Conference of 1919, developed, under the Fascist régime, diplomatic ambitions. It thought, naturally enough, but doubtless with exaggeration, of its prestige. It considered that France stood in the way of its designs. Those designs were to be, among other things, the principal power in the Balkans. Moreover, Italy dreamt of colonial expansion. Its nationals outnumber the French nationals in Tunis, which is controlled by the French. Moreover, there were causes of friction in Tangier, in whose administration Italy asked greater participation. In Ethiopia, France and Italy found their interests in opposition. Further, in French territory which is adjacent to Italy, such as the Riviera, the Italian refugees alleged to be plotting against the Italian Duce.

France, on its side, though not deliberately, could not altogether subdue the crusading sentiments which have always characterized it. There are Frenchmen who feel themselves to be missionaries. It has been so for countless generations. The Radicals in particular were unable to look upon Italy with friendly feelings because the Italian Government was not in accordance with their own democratic ideals.

In these circumstances, Italy, which already had incipient quarrels with Jugoslavia, signed a first Treaty of Tirana with Albania, practically establishing a protectorship over that little enclave on the Adriatic. Thereupon, Jugoslavia, jealous of Italian hegemony in the Adriatic, signed a treaty with France: and Italy then concluded a second treaty of Tirana with Albania. There were here the makings of a first-class conflict. Fortunately, a consciousness of the possibilities was aroused, especially in France; and the first steps were taken toward a revision of Franco-Italian relations.

Talk, do not sulk! was the advice which was heard in France; and M. Briand clearly invited Mussolini to meet him. He appointed M. de Beaumarchais as Ambassador to Rome, with instructions to endeavor to find common ground for a reconciliation. So the matter stands, and it is to be trusted that, before long, it will be possible to register a substantial improvement in the Franco-Italian outlook.

Steel Fortifies Its Defenses

THE realignment of the board of strategy of the United States Steel Corporation may be regarded as indicating a determination on the part of those responsible for the direction of that company's domestic and foreign trade relations to equip itself to meet strong outside competition. The recently chosen governing body, composed of J. P. Morgan, James A. Farrell and Myron C. Taylor, is representative of no factors new in the organization. The Morgan interests have long been powerful in the affairs of the corporation. The two other members of the triumvirate simply are reallocated or reas-

It is in the quite definite co-ordination and delegation of supervisory direction and authority to the three officers that there is seen the purpose to carry on, aggressively if necessary, the progressive program of production and marketing which proved so successful under the régime of Elbert H. Gary. It is interestingly explained that the chairman of the board, who now is Mr. Morgan, is no longer an executive officer of the company. Mr. Farrell, again chosen as president of the corporation, becomes its chief executive officer. "under the direction and supervision of the finance committee and the company's board of directors." Mr. Taylor is chairman of the finance committee.

This realignment of directing and supervising authority is of especial interest at the moment because of recent developments in the steelproducing industry in some of the principal European countries. Only recently American steel producers complained that German steel was being marketed in the United States at a price lower than in Germany, and consequently that the "anti-dumping" law was being violated. The United States Treasury Department was appealed to, and Secretary Mellon issued a ruling that present German steel imports to America were perfectly legal, but that the Treasury Department would nevertheless keep vigilant watch to "prevent American industries from being subjected to unfair competition."

This, apparently, was the first distinct echo of the European steel cartel's failure to reach an agreement on a "foreign" sales policy at its recent meeting, December 9, at Brussels. Is there a valid reason for believing, as some have pointed out, that an international steel war is ahead as a result of Germany's reported declaration at the meeting that it planned an underselling campaign to get rid of a large overproduction? At any rate, the fact that the European trust directors are not scheduled to meet again until March 22, 1928, was taken to indicate that each member intends pursuing his own way—at least in foreign fields.

One qualified correspondent reported at the time of the Brussels meeting that the failure of the members of the European steel cartel to agree on foreign sales had raised the question of doubt about the entente existing very much longer. That there is difficulty of agreement among the eight members—Germany, France. Belgium, Luxembourg, the Saar, Czechoslovakia, Austria, and Hungary—has been apparent right along, and was commented on in the special report on the origin and development of the cartel issued by the United States Department of Commerce last June. At the time of its organization the steel cartel was watched with interest by the United States, Great Britain and other steel-producing nations. In America, Roger W. Babson pronounced the combine as favorable to United States industries, because it would eliminate price cutting; and besides, he said, the United States and Great Britain were bound to be in a better position with Europe on a more normal basis. Others saw that although the trust would not affect the North American market, it would intensify the struggle for the markets of Latin America. Special efforts by the Germans to have Great Britain and Italy join the trust have so far failed.

The reason given for the Brussels failure was that Belgium held out for 10 per cent more on her foreign sales quota, and that France, also with an overproduction, suddenly made a likewise dramatic demand for an additional 15 per cent. This was evidently what produced the confusion which prevented agreement. Germany has been the dominant figure in the European steel cartel and was the prime mover in its organization. Much was expected of it at first, but ensuing economic changes seem to have somewhat destroyed German expectations. The combined steel output of the eight members of the cartel in 1926 was 29,834,835 metric tons, or 33 per cent of the world output, while that of the United States in the same year was 49,006,641 metric tons, or 55 per cent of the world's production.

Carrying Freight by Airplane

THERE is evidence that, even if the steam railways were, to an extent, caught napping when the motor carrier of freight and passengers made its appearance in large num-bers, they do not intend again to be unprepared in the case of the airplane. In a quiet way, several steam railroads have been considering the possibilities of air transport, not only from the standpoint of the competition which it may offer against steam lines, but as a supplementary means of handling their own passengers in special cases.

In its present state, there is no likelihood that the airplane will become as serious a competitor of the railroads as have the motortruck and bus. The Milwaukee Road, in a recent publication, stated: "A one-ton capacity airplane. flying 100 miles an hour, continuously, between Seattle and Chicago, would take about fifteen years to transport the tonnage hauled by one Milwaukee Road train." Based upon carefully computed figures, it is immediately apparent from a concrete example of this sort that until and unless the airplane has a much greater capacity, it cannot become a serious competitor of the railways, at least for freight which does not require fast handling at the high rates which prevail by air. Yet the matter of air transport is one which warrants the thoughtful attention which the railroads are bestowing upon it. The mails are being handled by air in increasing volume, and obviously this will have its effect upon the railways, to which the mail contracts have been highly profitable in many instances.

The volume of transcontinental air mail has doubled in the past year, statistics indicate. Recently, the American Railway Express Company contracted to have express shipments handled by airplanes. This business is said to be growing, also, and while the tonnage proportion of express to mail is still only one to three, this ratio is expected to be reversed eventually, as the value of air transport of light, expensive articles becomes more appreciated. This, likewise, affects the steam railroads.

Passenger travel by air in the United States is still a negligible figure. The rates, according to the Railway Age, average thirteen cents per mile, or more than three times the rail charges, icluding Pullman. The increase in the use of airplanes does not necessarily mean a net loss to the steam railways. Motor transport, despite the loss in passenger business which it brought to the railroads, enriched the steam lines immeasurably by the traffic which was the product of the motor manufacturing plants. It is not unreasonable to expect that the airplane will have a similar tendency. Whether or not this is the ultimate result, its present capacity and cost for transporting mail, passengers and express make it look like a factor of relatively small concern to the steam railroads. But so, also, did the motortruck once appear. It is because the rail officers recall the latter situation that they are not overlooking the air carrier as a potential competitor whose development is worth following.

Inheritance Tax Problems

THE action of the House Ways and Means Committee, in reporting a tax-reduction bill that overrode the recommendation of Andrew W. Mellon, United States Secretary of the Treasury, for the repeal of the federal inheritance tax, may be regarded as assuring that this tax will not be repealed by the present Congress. The familiar arguments in favor of repeal. were submitted to the committee by delegations representing important business and financial interests, and the usual appeal that this particular tax should be left to the several states was made by representatives of some state governments. There appeared to be no organized movement in support of the tax, and had the amount of revenue derived from it been the only issue involved, a provision for its repeal might have been included in the bill. As it was, the prevailing sentiment for retention of the tax appears to have been based upon other considerations than that of the relatively small amount annually paid into the public treasury.

One of the reasons actuating the committee's ecision was a feeling against what is alleged to be a general policy of devising tax laws that will permit great fortunes or incomes to escape their fair share of taxation. The issuance of tax-exempt bonds by the national and state governments, by enabling those who invest in them to escape the tax levied upon other forms of personal property, has prompted a general demand for elimination of the tax-exemption feature from future bond issues. The decision of the Supreme Court of the United States holding dividends of stock in corporations untaxable as income has also aided in forming a sentiment against tax-dodging. The simple fact that with the federal tax on inheritances repealed, all those wishing to evade state taxes of the same kind could take up a nominal residence in Flor-ida, or in any of the few states that impose no tax, appears to have effectively blocked the demand for repeal.

Measured by the standards prescribed by some students of the subject of equitable taxation, the inheritance tax may not be justifiable, in that it is often a tax on thrift and industry, as well as upon unearned wealth. The objection that it is socialistic and intended to take an unfair share of devised property can hardly be maintained. The American sponsors of the inheritance tax were Andrew Carnegie, who advocated it more than thirty years ago, and Theodore Roosevelt, who when President urged the adoption of some form of federal inheritance tax. Unless some better argument than references to alleged Socialism can be found for repealing this tax, it is likely to remain a part of the national revenue system.

A Football Schism

HE present athletic break between Annapolis and West Point, the great army and navy academies of the United States, over eligibility rules is attracting more general attention throughout the country than almost any disagreement that has occurred in college athletic circles since the famous Harvard-Yale schism over thirty years ago. Annapolis has put into effect the well-known intercollegiate three-year rule, while West Point has not adopted it. West Point and Annapolis maintain teams in almost every variety of sport, and not only do these teams meet each other, but they also meet the teams of other large colleges. Practically all of these rival colleges are observing the three-year rule, and the Navy has adopted it with a view to placing its athletic standards on the same level as those of the teams which it is accustomed to meet. The fact that the Army declines to do this has resulted in the contract calling for the 1928 football game between the two academies remaining unsigned.

The annual Army-Navy football game ranks among the most popular in the United States. It is always played between the two elevens with the finest of sportsmanship prevailing and it is clean, hard football which is furnished to the spectators.

Fortunately, while the authorities at the two academies are apparently resting on their oars, it is not so in other circles and efforts are being made to straighten out the tangle in time for a football game next November. Athletic competitions between these two academies are well worth while and should not be allowed to be given up on anything like a difference over eli-

Disregarding the merits of the present controversy, it is to be hoped that the friends of the two academies may bring about an agreement which will not only put the teams on an equal footing regarding eligibility rules but also assure to their legion of friends the continuance of one of the finest and most wholesome athletic competitions that takes place in the course of a year.

Arbitration Wins a Whole Loaf

DY THE settlement of the teachers' salary dispute in Carmarthenshire (Wales) the victory of conciliation throughout the whole field of English education is complete. There is now no local education authority and no member of the teaching profession in the publicly maintained schools of England and Wales outside the bounds of the national agreement. This victory has come about by stages in the short space of eight years. Before the farsighted and statesmanlike action of Mr. Fisher in establishing the joint committee of authorities and teachers, strikes, lockouts and unrest were rife in the world of education. In fact, education was imperiled, and with it the larger interests of the state. The joint committee under the chairmanship of Lord Burnham has by a rapid succession of stages, obtained the co-operation and adhesion of every local authority in the country. Many were reluctant to come in at first, but with the acquiescence of the last dissentient, Carmarthenshire, the agreement is complete, and unbroken peace now reigns in the schools.

The fact that this victory has been won in the field of education is gratifying to all who are working for national harmony and industrial co-operation. No example of discord now flaunts itself before the eyes of the children in the formative years of their lives. The pupils in the schools will be trained in the ways of peace not only by precept, but by that more potent teacher—example. And not the children only. but the Nation as a whole, statesmen, industrialists, labor leaders, and the great mass of the people, may learn from this great example.

Between the gift of $1,000,000 to George Washington University by the Scottish Rite Masons for a school of government, and the richly endowed Brookings Research Institution which will feature post-graduate work in government administration, there is promise that Washington may be guided to operate the ship of state to the best advantage.

"The 1927 Balance Sheet for Peace and Progress"

ANKIND continues to move forward. The urge of the human race is toward higher levels. During the past twelve months there has been witnessed a steady advance toward the consummation of a righteous world order. True, there have been moments of perplexity. Men and nations have been confused on more than one occasion. Agreement has not always been possible. The pessimist has not failed to exploit, for his own purpose, these all-too-frequent digressions from the path of progress. It is well to remind ourselves, in view of this fact, that the 1927 balance sheet for peace and progress has that the 1927 balance sheet for-peace and progress has many items to its credit.

We have witnessed, during the past year, a rising tide of popular opinion in support of an international policy that would totally and unequivocally renounce war as a method of settling disputes between nations. The cause of arbitration was served in a handsome way when, on September 24, the League of Nations adopted, by unanimous vote, the Polish Resolution, declaring that "all wars of aggression are and always shall be prohibited, and that every pacific means must be employed to settle disputes of every description which may arise between states."

This resolution "recommends the progressive extensio of arbitration by means of particular or collective agree-ments between states, members and nonmembers of the League of Nations, in order that there may result be-tween all states a growth of the mutual confidence indispensable to the success of the Disarmament Conference."
Aggressive wars, by this resolution, were branded as "international crimes." There has been appointed, as a result of that action, a Committee on Security that is to func-tion as a subordinate body under the League of Nations'

Preparatory Commission on Disarmament.

In America, at the present time, this interest in arbitration is expressing itself in the advocacy of the proposal of Aristide Briand, made in an Associated Press dispatch to the people of the United States, for an outlawry-of-war treaty between France and the United States. Petitions favoring this proposal have been sent to Washington; organizations by the score have adopted resolutions favoring such an all-inclusive covenant of arbitration with France and like-visioned nations; churches and schools have spoken in favor of this enlargement and extension of the arbitration policies of the American Government; peace-declamation contests have been initiated among the youth of the Nation for the further stimulation of public interest in the question of arbitration

A delegation, headed by Miss Jane Addams, president of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, waited upon President Coolidge, on December 10, presenting to the occupant of the White House an outawry-of-war petition containing 30,000 signatures. The President, according to a statement subsequently issued by Miss Addams, was only waiting for the return to Paris Myron T. Herrick, United States Ambassador to France, in order to initiate conversations with the French Government relative to M. Briand's proposal.

A delegation of representative churchmen interviewed President Coolidge on November 2 and presented to him a memorial declaratory of the belief of the 700 or more religious leaders whose names were affixed thereto,

(I) That war should never again be resorted to by civilized nations as the means for settling disputes or enforcing claims,

(2) That war, save for self-defense against actual attack, should be outlawed and declared by the nations to be an international crime,

(3) That the renunciation of war by treaties and solemn engagements should be undertaken between all the principal nations, adequate provision being made for conciliation, mediation, arbitration and judicial settle-

(4) That such engagements constitute an essential measure in creating the spirit of mutual confidence which must precede a general movement for disarmament, and
(5) That the settlement of every threatening dispute, whatever its nature, must be sought only by pacific means.

Tentative drafts of treaties have been drawn up incorporating M. Briand's suggestion for the renunciation of war, and these draft treaties are now before the people for discussion. Senator Arthur Capper (Kansas), on No-vember 21, made public the draft of a joint congressional resolution, declaratory of the following policy on the part

(1) By treaty with France and other like-visioned nations formally to renounce war as an instrument of public policy and to adjust and settle its international disputes by mediation, arbitration and conciliation;
(2) By formal declaration to accept the definition of aggressor nation as one which, having agreed to submit international differences to conciliation, arbitration or judicial settlement, begins hostilities without having done so: and (3) By treaty with France and other like-visioned nations to declare that the nationals of the contracting governments should not be protected by their govern-ments in giving aid and comfort to an aggressor nation. Senator William E. Borah (Idaho), it will be remembered, already has an outlawry-of-war treaty pending in the United States Senate. These various resolutions may not be adopted in the form in which they have drawn up, but there was a time, not long since past, when such declarations of policy were not even considered a debatable question in legislative assemblies. The outlawry of war has challenged the serious attention of statesmer diplomatists, educators, and men of every profession and

Moreover, there have been a number of all-inclusive arbitration treaties signed during the past twelve months by several of the European powers. Sweden and Belgium have lately agreed never to go to war with one another for any cause whatsoever. This blanket agreement covers all disputes, including those affecting "national honor" and "vital interests." Similar treaties making war "illegal" are now in force between Sweden and Denmark, and Sweden and Finland. France and Denmark, on July 5, contracted to keep the peace by undertaking "to settle in all cases by peaceful means . . . all disputes of every kind . . which have not proven susceptible to settlement kind . . . which have not proven susceptible to settlement by ordinary diplomatic processes."

The acceptance by Germany of the optional clause of the World Court Protocol was a significant advance in the accomplishment of a warless world. By this action, announced on September 9, Germany has bound herself, voluntarily, to submit to the decision of a court of law all questions arising out of the interpretation of a treaty. This optional clause has now been signed by seven states, Germany being the only so-called "great power" to take this step. Forty-three nations have thus far signed eighty-two treaties outlawing war between the signatory governtwo treaties outlawing war between the signatory govern ments.

The genuine concern of the American people with respect to arbitration was made clear when, on January 19, an appeal for the amicable settlement of the Nation's differences with Mexico was sent to President Coolidge over the signatures of 450 persons prominently identified with the civil, political, religious and educational activities of the Nation. A similar petition was sent on March 17, bearing the names of 11,385 persons. These requests for arbitration kept reaching Washington from places near and remote. All of which indicates the progress that has been made by the public thought with regard to the peace issue.

It is not out of place, in this connection, to recall that the Senate, on January 25, formally adopted the Robinson Resolution, in which the definite suggestion was made that all existing differences of opinion with Mexico regarding the controverted oil and laws should be settled by arbitral processes. This action was a distinct victory for the cause of international justice and good will. There can be no denying the fact that people generally are more alert today than they have ever been in these questions of world conduct. That is all to the good, and an indication of the fact that the world is getting on.

With regard to disarmament it may be said that the Three-Power Naval Conference that convened in Geneva on June 20 was not a total failure. The inability of the naval technicians to arrive at a disarmament formula has on June 20 was not a total failure. The inability of the naval technicians to arrive at a disarmament formula has been deplored in England, Japan and the United States. Viscount Cecil, soon after the adjournment of the Geneva parley, turned in his portfolio to the Baldwin Government in order to devote himself unreservedly to the furtherance of disarmament which he described as "the most mportant cause in the world."

Lord Cecil is now advocating the continued co-opera-tion of Great Britain with the work of the Preparatory Disarmament Commission, the signing by Great Britain of the optional clause of the World Court Statute, and of the optional clause of the World Court Statute, and the negotiation of all-inclusive arbitration treaties. The resignation of Viscount Cecil was almost immediately followed by W. C. Bridgeman's announcement in the House of Commons in mid-November, that Great Britain would delete two heavy cruisers from her naval program.

The Japanese delegates to the Geneva parley have repeatedly declared that their country stood ready to continue the negotiations broken off last summer. And, finally, President Coolidge has said, "I am opposed to engaging in any attempt at competitive armaments."

engaging in any attempt at competitive armam + + +

The larger implications of the disarmament issue continue to receive the attention of the League's Prepara-tory Disarmament Commission. This body met in Geneva on March 21, the American delegation being headed by Hugh Gibson, United States Minister to Switzerland. At that time two proposed treaties or draft conventions were presented, one by Great Britain, the other by France. The form of these tentative disarmament formulas differed in many important respects. The English delegation regarded the French plan for the limitation of "ultimate" war strength as impracticable, suggesting in turn that limitation must be based on existing peace-time strength.

The United States was again represented at the November session of the Preparatory Commission. Russia, too, sent a large delegation to Geneva at that time for the suppless of unging a complete and universal disagrament. purpose of urging a complete and universal disarmament policy. The year's debates on this perplexing problem have thrown into bold relief the difficulties still to be overcome before the swords of the nations can be placed on museum shelves. In the meantime, during the progress of these deliberations, there has been developed an unprecedented interest among all peoples in the paring down of military budgets and in the progressive limitation of armaments. The tide of public opinion has set in against an unrestrained competition in military establishments.

Evidence keeps piling up that the desire for peace among the nations represents something more than doctrinaire pacifism. Peaceful professions are being backed up by peaceful deeds. On February 1 the extremely delicate question of the supervision of German armaments passed from allied control to supervision by the League's Council. During the month of March, the Albanian crisis with Italy and Jugoslavia was amicably settled through the timely intervention of the League of Nations. Italy had claimed that Jugoslavia was preparing to overthrow the Albanian Government by force of arms. This declaration caused a tremendous scare in Balkan circles, but M. Peritch, the Jugoslavian Foreign Minister, circles, but M. Peritch, the Jugoslavian Foreign Minister, stated in a speech in the Skuptschina that he would accept the intervention of a league commission. Dr. Stresemann, acting president of the League Council, indicated that that body was ready for action, whereupon the situation quieted, and peace finally prevailed.

In that same month the dispute between Germany and Poland regarding the establishment of German schools for the minority population in Luner Silesia was activated.

for the minority population in Upper Silesia was settled through the functioning of the Council. The ability of the children in question to understand German was agreed upon as the test to determine their right to attend German schools. It was also in March that the question of the maintenance of allied troops in the Saar Valley was lighted of in a presented to the property of the state of the same and th disposed of in a peaceable manner. Both Germany and the Saar Government had been demanding the speedy withdrawal of French troops. Germany finally agreed to the establishment of a special corps of 800 transport guards recruited from the allied armies of occupation.

The past year has also witnessed the healing of a breach between Russia and Switzerland, which makes possible the presence of the representatives of the Soviet Government at all important Geneva parleys. The elecion of Germany to I dates Commission, the body that supervises control of that country's former territorial possessions, must also be regarded as a splendid gesture of international good

Peace between Poland and Lithuania was con through the friendly intervention of the League's Council on December 10. The peaceful settlement of the dispute between these two countries has been acclaimed as one of the League's greatest triumphs. Marshal Pilsudski of Poland and Premier Waldemaras of Lithuania settled across the conference table issues that heretofore might have resulted in armed conflict. At the end of the Geneva conversations the Polish Premier is reported to have said, "I shall order a Te Deum of Joy to be sung in all the churches of Poland." To which Premier Waldemaras is said to have replied, "I also will have Te Deums sungbut may these Te Deums be for peace among men of good

One of the year's most conspicuous accomplishments of the World Court was the handling of the Lotus case between France and Turkey, a dispute growing out of the sinking of a Turkish vessel in the Ægean Sea by a French steamship. In September the Court rendered a judgment favorable to Turkey and the decision of the Court was immediately accepted in a conciliatory manner by the losing party.

The matter of America's adherence to the World Court was reopened on December 12 when a memorial bearing was reopened on December 12 when a memorial bearing the signatures of nearly 500 distinguished citizens of forty-eight states was presented to President Coolidge, in which the petitioners urged the President to continue friendly conversations with the nations signatory to the Court Protocol in an effort to reach an early settlement of the points at issue.

It may be recalled that the chief stumblingblock to

America's participation in the work of the Court rests in the fifth reservation attached to the Senate's vote of ad-herence, in which the specification is made that the Court shall not entertain a request for an advisory opinion on any subject in which the United States has or claims an any subject in which the United States has or claims an interest without the consent of the United States.

The campaign against the international traffic in drugs continues. During the current year Persia declared her willingness to adopt the League's plan for the reduction of opium at the rate of 10 per cent yearly for three years. The Nationalist Government of China has decided on the complete prohibition of opium in three years. An announcement to this effect has recently been made by the Chinese National Christian Council. The planting of the poppy is to be forbidden. At the end of 1927-28 the sale of opium will be reduced by one-third; at the end of 1929 another third, and by July, 1930, it will be brought to an end.

Regarding the consumption of opium, a thorough system of registration is to be initiated immediately. All addicts under the age of twenty-one will be required to give up the habit immediately. Those above that age will be given amelioration certificates, stating the amount of opium they are allowed while breaking off the habit, on the understanding that in three years the supply of opium will be totally stopped.
